ic Story of a Wichita Girl Who Held Up Her Lips for the First Time Years Ago, and Was Separated From : Fream About and Never Failed to Love -There is a Strange Meeting in Cincinnati--An Incomplete Climax to it All--She Tells Her Own Story.

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 17. Dear Eagle-I have found another old maid and strange to say she was, as I, a society girl in Wichita. I want to tell her strange story to my old friends In Wichita, and I have written it over two or three times only to consign the manuscript to the fiames. I guess I Listen. You remember the old house-our old home-on Lawrence avenue? I was almost raised there. I spent most of younger days in school. I read only my school-books. When I was fifteen I had never read a novelsat there with my eyes full on his face, my finger-tips tingling, my breath coming fast and my eyes moist with some strange emotion.

Tidd not hear what he said. I only knew he was talking, soft and low. He had come to my side. I did hear then. It was a sort of a presumption which I resented. And I drew away from him. The sweetness of his persuasive voice did not vary at his backsect. He touched my check and taking his finger away watched the red of

"When he knew that I would kiss him," she went on, "his manner changed, There was a boastful ringno, not boastful-but something like It is the first time my lady-love,' he said, 'has been kissed? "I nodded."

"He took both my cheeks in either hand and lifting up my face said gently: "'Now for your first kiss."

"There was a ring at the front door."
I hastened out. It was the telegraph boy with a message for Ed. He tore it open under the hall light—his father was very sick in New Jersey. He took his hat and coat hurriedly and old mald friend paused as with

Well," said I, flippantly, "you wasn,t kissed after all?"
"Don't," she protested painfully,
"Don't say that, I loved that boy, For years I thought of no other, I never heard from him and I never forgot him. I have had other chances but I was true to him—true to him throughout, praying that I might meet him; that he might seek me out-dreaming always of him and of no other."

"And you were thinking of him when you got on this train crying?" I asked. "Listen," she said. "I was alone in Cincinnati, It was late, I could stay. I had to take this train. I am a

Until quite recently there lived among us in this city, a remarkable woman. She was one of those charac-ters that we meet but once in a life-time; one of those whose individual greatness commands respect and in-spires love, to whom we are compelled to look up in wouder and veneration. Mrs. Dora Kohn was such a character. A few weeks since she left for Kansas City with her daughter, Mrs. M. W. Levy, to visit other children there, and after a short illness has now

It becomes then a semi-benevo lont institution as well as a safe deposit for weekly savings. It is that best possible form of benevolence which helps the wage earner to help himself. Thousands of mechanics, clerks and day laborers in the larger cities have provided their families with comfortable homes through the agency of these associations. If this is done elsewhere it may be done, and is being done in Wichita. This institution, under the control of a directory composed of some of the solid men of the city, who have cheer-fully donated their time to its management, should be investigated by every man or woman who has a dollar or a low dollars to spare from their weekly income. The secretary may be seen every day during business hours in the Citizens' bank building.
